Treating children and their families is one of the cornerstones of British general practice and brings challenges to both new and experienced GPs. This full day course will update and improve confidence in a number of areas relating to pediatrics. These include child and adolescent mental health, making sense of evidence (using examples such as the use of antibiotics for common childhood illnesses), ‘things that usually aren’t cancer’ and managing a child presenting with developmental concerns.

Key Benefits
A chance to share and reflect on current paediatric practice.
Practical advice from local specialists.
Opportunity to discuss real world cases.
Advice on who and when to refer.
